THE WRECK OF THE TITAN

by MORGAN ROBERTSON

PROLOGUE.

A wonderfully prophetic fiction story written four years ago of the wreck of the TITAN, which, like the Titanic, was the world's largest and most palatial vessel and generally regarded as unsinkable and indestructible. Like the Titanic, too, the TITAN was wrecked by an iceberg in the month of April when speeding along the northern lane route of the Atlantic. The wreck in

CHAPTER I.

The Unsinkable Titan.

HE was the largest craft afloat and the greatest of the works of men. In her construction and maintenance were involved every science, profession and trade known to civilization. On her bridge were officers, w.e., besides being the pick of the royal navy, had passed rigid examinations in all studies that pertained to the winds, tides, currents and geography of the sea. They were not only seamen, but scientists. The same professional standard applied to the personnel of the engine room, and the steward's department was equal to that of a first class hotel.

Two brass bands, two orchestras and a theatrical company entertained the passengers during waking hours, a corps of physicians administered to the temporal and a corps of chaplains to the spiritual welfare of all on board, while a well drilled fire company soothed the fears of nervous ones and added to the general entertainment by daily practice with their apparatus.

From her lofty bridge ran hidden telegraph lines to the bow, stern, engine room, crow's nest on the foremast and to all parts of the ship where work was done, each wire terminating in a marked dial with a movable indicator containing in its scope every order and answer required in handling the massive hulk, either at the dock or at sea, which eliminated to a great extent the hoarse, nerve racking shouts of officers and sailors.

From the bridge, engine room and a dozen places on her deck the ninety-two doors of nineteen water tight compartments could be closed in half a minute by turning a lever. These doors would also close automatically in the presence of water. With nine compartments flooded the ship would still float, and as no known accident of the sea could possibly fill this many the steamship Titan was considered practically unsinkable.

Built of steel throughout and for passenger traffic only, she carried no combustible cargo to threaten her destruction by fire, and the immunity from the demand for cargo space had enabled her designers to discard the flat, kettle bottom of cargo boats and give her the sharp dead rise—or slant from the keel—of a steam yacht, and this improved her behavior in a seaway. She was 800 feet long, of 70,000 tons displacement, 40,000 horsepower, and on her trial trip had steamed at a rate of twenty-five knots an hour over the bottom, in the face of unconsidered winds, tides and currents. In short, she was a floating city, containing within her steel walls all that tends to minimize the dangers and discomforts of the Atlantic voyage, all that makes life enjoyable.

Unsinkable, indestructible, she carried as few boats as would satisfy the laws. These, twenty-four in number, were securely covered and lashed down to their chocks on the upper deck, and if launched would hold 500 people. She carried no useless, cumbersome life rafts, but, because the law required it, each of the 3,000 berths in the fiction story happened in about the same place that the Titanic disaster occurred, and there were not sufficient life boats and rafts to take off the passengers and crew. Read and you will see that there are many other remarkable and startling coincidences between the wreck of the TITAN, the largest steamship of the world of fiction, and the wreck of the Titanic, the largest steamship of the material world.

with oil cans and waste, overseen by the watchful staff on duty, who listened with strained hearing for a false note in the confused jumble of sound or a clicking of steel out of tune which would indicate a loosened key or nut. On deck sailors set the triangular sails on the two masts to add their propulsion to the momentum of the record breaker, and the passengers dispersed themselves as suited their tastes. Some were seated in steamer chairs, well wrapped, for, though it was April, the salt air was chilly; some paced the deck, acquiring their sea legs; others listened to the orchestra in the music room or read or wrote in the library, and a few took to their berths, seasick from the slight heave of the ship on the ground swell.

The decks were cleared, watches set at noon, and then began the never ending cleaning up at which steamship sailors put in so much of their time. Handed by a six foot boatswain, a gang came aft on the starboard side with paint buckets and brushes and distributed themselves along the rail. "Davits an' stanchions, men—never mind the rail," said the boatswain. "Ladies, better move your chairs back a little. Rowland, climb down out o' that; you'll be overboard. Take a ventilator. No; you'll spill paint. Put your bucket away an' get some sandpaper from the yeoman. Work inboard till you get it out o' you."

The sailor addressed, a slight built man of about thirty, black bearded and bronzed to the semblance of healthy vigor, but watery eyed and unsteady of movement, came down from the rail and shuffled forward with his bucket. As he reached the group of ladies to whom the boatswain had spoken his gaze rested on one, a sunny haired young woman with the blue of the sea in her eyes, who had arisen at his approach. He started, turned aside as if to avoid her and, raising his hand in an embarrassed half salute, passed on. Out of the boatswain's slight he leaned against the deck house and panted, while he held his hand to his breast.

"What is it," he muttered wearily—"whisky nerves or the dying flutter of a starved love? Five years now and a look from her eyes can stop the blood in my veins—can bring back all the heart hunger and helplessness that lead a man to insanity—or this." He looked at his trembling hand, all seamed and tar stained, passed on forward and returned with the sandpaper.

The young woman had been equally affected by the meeting. An expression of mingled surprise and terror had come to her pretty but rather weak face, and with acknowledging his half salute she had caught up a little child from the deck behind her and, turning into the saloon door, hurried to the library, where she sank into a chair beside a military looking gentleman, who glanced up from a book and remarked: "Seen the sea serpent, Myra, or the Flying Dutchman? What's up?" "Oh, George—no!" she answered in agitated tones. "John Rowland is here—Lieutenant Rowland. I've just seen him; he is so changed; he tried to speak to me."

"Who—that troublesome flame of yours? I never met him, you know, and you haven't told me much about him. What is he—first cabin?" "No; he seems to be a common sailor. He is working and is dressed in old clothes, all dirty. And such a dissipated face too. He seems to have fallen—so low. And it is all since—" "Since you sored on him? Well, it is no fault of yours, dear. If a man has it in him he'll go to the dogs anyhow. How is his sense of injury? Has he a grievance or a grudge? You are badly upset. What did he say?"

"I don't know. He said nothing. I've always been afraid of him. I've met him three times since then, and he puts such a frightful look in his eyes—and he was so violent and headstrong and so terribly angry that time. He accused me of leading him on and playing with him, and he said something about an immutable law of chance and a governing balance of events that I couldn't understand, only where he said that for all the suffering we inflict on others we receive an equal amount ourselves. Then he went away in such a passion. I've imagined ever since that he would take some revenge. He might steal my Myra—our baby!" She strained the smiling child to her breast and went on. "I liked him at first, until I found out that he was an atheist. Why, George, he actually denied the existence of God and to me, a professing Christian."

WANTED!

Your neighbor to subscribe for the Mountaineer. He needs it and we need him. Will you help us in getting him?

If you will do this you will profit by it as well as we. The more subscribers the better paper. Our goal is 1,000 subscribers by July 1st. Can we do it? We can if you will help. Give us a lift. Rates $1.00 per year, 10cts per month for less than a year.

Correspondence.

TO CORRESPONDENTS: Mail your letters early so they will get to us at later than Monday night. RULES: Write on one side of the paper only; write plainly; spell names correctly, and write "Cor" on the envelope.

Leave out neighborhood visits or we will.

If your letter does not appear, remember that it was either too late or that its contents did not justify publication.

We leave out a part, or all, of other letters as well as yours.

Our space is limited and we must leave out much that is intended for publication. That is one of the many unthankful tasks of the editor.

Correspondents get your LETTERS in early.

JULIAN.

Oscar Salyer started to Jenkins Friday on business.

Matthew Slier shot Charley Collins Thursday with a shot gun, four shots penetrating his flesh, one striking him in the corner of the eye and is giving him much trouble. Cause was Collins killing Salyer's dog.

Jack T. Bailey is having his new house painted.

Hon. Noah Pa rick, of B'omington, passed through here Monday enroute to Salyersville. WELCOME.

OLDE.

Olde has the best mail service in Eastern Kentucky. The mail carrier is always on time, sometimes, and that has just been once in a month.

I will ask the editor a few questions:

1. Does an editor ever work any?
2. Does an editor ever get tired?
3. Does an editor ever have any money?
4. Does an editor wear good clothes?
5. Does an editor ever get mad?
6. Does an editor ever tell the truth?

PUFF STUFF.

EDITOR'S ANSWER—1 He works only when he has to.

2 If an editor ever gets tired, working day and night he'd better quit the business.

3 Money! Of course. He must pay the postage. This is about the only expense, at least some of our readers think so, otherwise they would subscribe and read their own paper rather than a borrowed copy. They would also deal with our advertisers.

4 What would prevent him when every merchant in town is anxious to boost their trade by boosting their local paper?

5 Pray tell us how an editor could get mad when all people unite in complimenting him in his noble work.

6 We hold our peace while our readers answer.

GIFFORD.

Corn planting and bee swarming is the order of the day.

Last weeks warmth and sunshine enabled the farmers to do lots of much needed plowing and planting, as the rains of the past few weeks had put them far behind with their crops, but a few more days of fair weather will finish their planting.

Married on the 25th, Willie Caudill and Eliza Williams, both of Gifford. May theirs be a happy union.

Amanda, daughter of Madison Gullett, has returned to her home and her many friends welcome her back, hoping she will soon out among us soon.

Nineteen Hundred and the Good Old Summer Time.

I don't often get into politics because I can't please most people, but I venture to say Bryan and Taft will be our next nominees. I don't have any inside tip either. I'm judging by the way the folks down here talk. Now I don't have any money to put up but if I had an extra n'ckell I'd risk it on these two men.

I told you last week that I'd write about the most wonderful thing I ever saw.

It's this way. I went to a friends home and stayed a few weeks. I had a great time. I couldn't keep from noticing my friend's wife. She was what I'd call a first class looker, yet I've seen prettier women. But it wasn't her looks so much as her manners that caught my attention. The woman actually lived week after week without giving her husband or children a short word.

My friend came in cutting a high rusty and yet she held her peace. She never said do so and so or don't do so and so. She never grumbled and spoke harshly. She never said "John I've got to have a new dress." She didn't even say "John our neighbor's wife has a new hat."

It didn't make any difference whether John did to suit her or not she never gave him a harsh word. John could whistle or sing or walk heavy and wake up the babies but she never said "Can't you hush." She didn't even pretend that there was any disturbance. Others could talk about their neighbors but my friends wife holds the record. She never said a bad thing against her neighbor in her life. If her neighbor said all manner of evil against her she took no notice of it. She was always silent in the presence of tattlers.

This, I thought, is the most wonderful sight I ever saw. She knew how to hold her tongue because she did not know how to use it. She was deaf and dumb. So deaf she could not hear it thunder. The mystery was solved. I awcke and it was a dream.

MY SECOND DREAM.

FOR PRESIDENT.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT,
of New York.

EDITORIAL.

"Honesty is the best policy" in politics as well as business.

Some people told us that we could not run a paper in this county. Now, of course not if a few lawless men can have their way. The paper stands against lawlessness.

We have three classes of Magoffin citizens, viz: Those who are anxious that their county has a newspaper, those who are anxious that our county has no paper, and those who do not give a red copper for our county to have a paper with. In which class are you?

OUR NEW PAPER.

This week we are beginning to use the adless service of the American Press Association. A glance will convince you of the superiority over the papers that have so much undesirable advertising in them. We have no patent medicine advertising that you do not want your children to read. In fact we do not have any patent medicine ads. If our subscribers will stand by us and our advertisers they can keep us on this high plane of journalism.

Freedom of Press.

Section 8 of the Constitution of Kentucky reads as follows: "Printing presses shall be free to every person who undertakes to examine the proceedings of the General Assembly or any branch of government, and no law shall ever be made to restrain the right thereof. Every person may freely and fully speak, write and print on ANY subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty."

The editor of the Mountaineer is a Kentuckian. So was his father, his grandfather and his great-grandfather. He demands this freedom of the press that the Constitution of Kentucky gives him. Shall we be permitted to "freely print on ANY subject" or shall we let Ern and Jack Arnett say what we shall or what we shall not say? Is our constitution to be ignored and every man to arm himself to protect his rights? What do you say Judge Gardner, and what do you say Mr. May, and what do you say officers of Magoffin county, and what do you say citizens of Magoffin county?

Here we have two men taking the affairs in their own hands and giving forth their will as though it were law. Jack Arnett demands of the editor of the Mountaineer that he must have an apology or his life and Jack is an "attorney-at-law" too.

If we fail then we are entering into the spirit of our clanish ancestors of Scotland of a few centuries ago rather than into the spirit of the 20th century law-abiding American citizen.

Where do you stand fellow citizens? Every man is either for or against lawlessness and every citizen should have the courage to speak out and tell his neighbor what he thinks of the law-breakers. If we are afraid to raise our voices against such lawlessness then our very cowardice helps to give other law-breakers courage.

Public sentiment rules everything. Laws are set aside or enforced according to public sentiment. Every man in the county helps to create this public sentiment. You my fellow readers by talking in favor of law will encourage others to do the same. If you are in favor of your home and your home being protected by the "strong arm of the law" then you should have sufficient courage to talk it to your neighbors whether they are law-abiding or lawless. You should also be willing to serve your county when you go on a jury and not some individual. Will you do it? Will you help to make Magoffin county a better county for homes, thereby increasing the value of every man's property, or will you be easy with the law-breakers, thereby encouraging others? We now leave our case in the hands of our courts and our people.

Contrary Fork of Pricy.

saw a strange man. He had eyes as I had and he had ears and could hear and he had a voice similar to mine. He could walk and talk, brag and boast what he'd do and what he wouldn't do, what he'd seen and what he hadn't seen just like I do, yet this man had the name of being a wonderful man. People came all the way from the head of Coon to see him. Their most learned doctors examined him. After careful searching and examining the greatest physicians could not find a single backbone. They took him off and put him under the X-ray and found not even the slightest trace of a backbone. Some said "he's a vertebrateless man." Others pronounced that he was a "backboneless man," still others said something like "Homo non vertebratae," and yet others said, "he's a vertebrateless biped non-reoanimalae." So many big sizzlin names made me feel like I was going round and round and then right straight up. But when I sorter caught my breath and come to myself I found that the earth was still under me.

From what Ruie learned from all this high falopian talk the man simply had no back bone. The marrow was there like it was in you and me but there was not the hair or hide of a bone to be found anywhere near. Then I said this is the most wonderful thing I ever saw. Strange, strange, strage, says I. Then I saw other men live unto the first. I thought they surely ought not to be called men. They are just live critters that you can't tell from men. I wondered and wondered at them. Thed I awoke and it was all true. Backboneless men were plentiful. They were the same as my hypocrits. They are the only kind of men that Ruie Johnson won't have in his new State.

I am glad to read of the success of the Mountaineer. Long may it ever shine like a yellow blossom on a pumpkin vine.

Farming is progressing nicely in this section.

Mrs. W. C. Nickell returned from Oklahoma Friday.

E. E. Elam has been improving his stock of farming implements with a black hawk corn drill, a mower, rake and hay baler.

Boys, you have heard of fish tales, listen to this rat tale. Last Sunday S. W. Adams had a crowd of boys for company and while they were strolling around they decided to have some fun out of two rat terrier pups at the barn. In about two hours they killed 140 rats, most of them full grown.

Hannah Romans has been visiting friends here this week.

L. C. Elam is very much stuck on his thoroughbred calf.

Nick Elam is still on the mend.

Burns Little and family, of Caney, spent Saturday and Sunday with his parents here.

Mrs. W. T. Elam spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents at Panama.

L. C. Elam and son Kelly killed two large chicken hawks Friday. One measured 4 feet from tip to tip.

B. J. Elam made a flying business trip to Louisville last week.

TREATING HORSE FOR WORMS

Three Different Remedies Given, Any One of Which Will Be Found to Be Quite Effective.

This is one of the best worm destroyers for unthrifty colts and horses that we have ever tried: Mix together one pound each of sugar and salt; in this mix one-half pound of fine smoking tobacco, six ounces of powdered sulphate of iron. As a dose for a mature horse give a heaping tablespoonful in a wheat bran mash every morning for two weeks. Colts should be given in smaller proportion to size and age.

A veterinary supply house advises the following remedy for worms in horses: Give a teaspoonful of powdered copper sulphate every morning in feed for three or four days, then give two ounces of turpentine in a pint of raw linseed oil. Feed softfeed and keep the infected animal in the stable while under this treatment.

A veterinary physician, signing no name, suggests this treatment in an exchange: Clear the bowels by allowing the horse to fast over night and give in the morning two ounces of turpentine in a pint of raw linseed oil or gruel, followed in the course of an hour with a bran mash; repeat this for two or three mornings. Santonin in half or one ounce doses, made into powders, with linseed meal, may be given to valuable horses for two or three mornings in succession, followed by a cathartic.

RACK FOR FEEDING CATTLE

Excellent Method Described for Giving Roughage to Animals During Winter Months.

To make a rack to feed cattle hay or other roughage during the winter set a stake at what is desired to be the center of the rack, then describe a circle around the stake with a radius of ten feet, which may be done either by using a tape line or a ten-foot pole, says the Homestead. Begin on this radius and set posts eight feet

Why?

Because it is practically as safe, and is in other respects superior.

1. It costs less.
2. It is paid for in moderate installments.
3. The investment is INSURED. That is to say, if the investor dies the unpaid installments are CANCELED, and the Society pays the insurance money in full at once.

One Good Mutton Breed.

Mutton sheep should never be of mixed breeds on one farm. Get one good mutton breed, stick to it and develop it to the highest notch possible. A lot of mixed lambs never bring the highest price on the market. It is those of one breed, uniform in size, shape and condition that get the big money.

Feed and Rest for Horses.

Feeding horses at least an hour and a half before harnessing them, and giving them a full hour at noon, is not only humane, but it is profitable to the owner. Horses shown these attentions last longer, do better service and are more free from ailments.

Training for Colt.

The profit and pleasure to be derived from the use of horses depends upon how much they have been trained. Every colt should be trained before he is put into hard work on the farm.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Linseed meal contains bone-forming matter.

Horses with tender feet need lots of attention.

In the purchase of a new horse always purchase a mare.

No domestic animals increase or decrease as rapidly as pigs.

Parasites common to sheep infest southern flocks just as elsewhere.

Keeping comfortable goes a long ways toward making cheap pork.

It is a mistake if the hog is not fed in a clean place free from dust and mud.

It should be remembered that a horse can do more than his feet will stand.

Failure to secure profits in hog raising are usually due to mismanagement.

Good clean food, pure water, fresh air and clean surroundings such as stables and yards will keep stock healthy and increase the profits on the place.

DEVICE FOR FEEDING SWINE

Swill Poured Through Tube Eliminates Trouble Caused by Animals Trying to Get It.

The illustration shows a handy hog feeder which will save the farmer much trouble, says a writer in the Handy for Feeding Hogs.

Orange Judd Farmer. Make a tube with inch boards about three and one-half feet high. Place this at one end of trough. Pour swill through this tube and you will not be bothered by the hogs in their eagerness to get the swill.

Sheep Are Nervous.

Sheep are nervous animals and of rather delicate constitutions and suffer more from bad ventilation and overcrowding than any other animal on the farm; it is a mistake therefore to confine sheep during the winter in close quarters. If kept dry their fleeces will keep them warm. Who ever heard of sheep freezing to death?

Leather Halter Preferred.

Use a leather halter rein instead of a chain when tying horses in their stalls. They may become entangled and the leather rein may possibly break and release them without serious injury, while the chain will hold and often times cause their death.

Mistake of Breeders.

A great many breeders seem to think if they possess a pure-bred boar the quality of the sows does not count for much. This is a sad mistake indeed, and farmers cannot be too careful in the selection of well-bred sows.

Pigs of Large Litters Best.

It is a fact that the pigs of large litters are usually more uniform in size and fatten more quickly than those of small litters. Here is where the good breeding of the sow comes in.

Dr. E. H. Atkeson is attending the State Medical Association at Louisville this week.

Mrs. J. S. Cisco, who has been visiting relatives at West Liberty for a few days, returned home Saturday.

Mrs. W. M. Gardner and children and Mrs. D. R. Keeton and children, of West Liberty, are visiting relatives here.

We can save you money on typewriter paper and stationery of all kinds. Call at the Mountaineer office and get prices.

On account of hard times we have decided to send the Mountaineer six months for fifty-five cents, formerly sixty cents, or 10 cents a month for less than six months.

Misses Mary and Lucy Gardner and Mesdames John Gardner and W. A. Hazlebrigg are attending the district convention of the Christian church at Louisa this week.

The six week summer term of the State Normal School at Richmond opens June 18th and closes July 26th. This is a State teacher-training school where students get free tuition.

Captain J. S. Cisco and a number of other officers of the Salyersville Company returned from Frankfort Monday where they had been attending a military school of instruction.

D. W. Garkner, Arr Arnett, T. J. Arnett, Ern Arnett, Joseph Arnett, E. L. Stephens, Dean Gardner, Bruce Atkeson, D. D. Sublett, Glenn Sublett and E. W. Pendleton are attending the Democratic State Convention at Louisville this week.

Circuit Court convenes here next Monday. Don't forget to tell your neighbor to subscribe to subscribe for the Mountaineer. If he doesn't agree to then insist. Tell him whatever his creed or politics that he should take his home county paper and get the news from every section of the county. Tell him that we are going to improve our paper and make it still better as we are enabled to.

Salyersville to Have Natural Gas.

Mr. M. E. Moore, of Charleston, W. Va., representing the Burning Fork Developing Co., has been promised a franchise by the Trustees of Salyersville when they meet Monday night at their regular meeting. This practically assures Salyersville of one of the greatest conveniences of modern times. Those who have never tried it cannot appreciate what it means to have no smoke, no soot, no ashes, no kindling, no carrying in of wood or coal at any time, no lamp chimneys to clean and no coal oil to buy or bother with. Nature has placed it here and the people should be benefitted by it. These people are planning to haul 150,000 pounds of piping when they get their franchise.

Excitement at Salyersville.

Ern Arnett Attempts to Intimidate Editor of Kentucky Mountaineer and Jack Arnett Levels a Forty-five on him, Demands an Apology or His Life.

Notwithstanding the fact that the editor and Mr. Caraway worked until about 9 o'clock at night to get our paper out last week Mr. Ern Arnett, who was sitting on the court house curb invited said editor to an upper room over the Minix grocery. Mr. Arnett proceeded to read from Ruie Johnson's letter the following: "If a man lives in adultery what is the difference if he owns it and is not ashamed of it?"

He then desired to know if that was intended for him. He stated that some people had made a vain effort to have him indicted for adultery.

He was asked to read the whole letter and then discuss it with the editor.

On the following morning in a brief conversation Mr. Arnett proceeded to inform the editor that we hereafter refrain from using the names of himself and Jack Arnett in the paper.

Mr. Arnett was informed that the editor was not responsible for the happening of news but that he would give the news out to the public as he was publishing a "new paper." This he would do whether the news related to his own brother or a relative of Mr. Arnett. Mr. Arnett replied, "I know you're not afraid but I want you to understand that you can't do it."

It is stated by different men that Jack Arnett said that he was going to kill the editor of the Mountaineer.

On Saturday afternoon while M. F. Patrick and the editor of the Mountaineer were talking by the curbing in front of the Court house Jack Arnett came to the door and said, "Get out of the way and let me kill him." Patrick looked around but did not move at first. Jack then said, "Get out of the way Me if fee before I shoot," and at the same time leveled a forty-five on Elam and said, "G— D— you, apologize or I'll shoot your heart out."

Jackson L. Arnett, deputy sheriff, started toward him when Jack leveled the gun on him and told him not to interfere. Jackson L. then saw that the gun was cocked and gave back slightly when Jack again pulled the gun on Elam. Jackson L. then rushed on him and assisted by Lark Arnett wrestled the gun from Jack's hands. He broke it down and found that it was loaded in every chamber but one.

Jackson L. stated that it was useless to try to put Jack in jail as Jack's friends would overpower him and prevent it. He said he'd had experiences of that kind before.

Bus Kirk, of Cincinnati, and Charley Arnett, Supt., are in town in the interest of the Licking Valley Railroad. They expect to be here several days.

Roosevelt carried New Jersey Tuesday which gives him 439 uncontested votes against Taft's 176, LaFollette's 36 and Cummins' 10. There are 115 uninstructed votes. Giving all of these uninstructed votes to his opponents he still has a majority of 674.

Saturday afternoon Ern Arnett accused Dee May (Sammy's son), a man who is usually considered one of the most honest men in the county, of stealing some fish that, it is said, Ern had seined near May's home. May denied the charge and Arnett used some of the most abusive language that is found in BLUE RIBBONS WON BY GOOD FEEDING.

"Those blue ribbons hanging there over the door are the result of diet," said Miss Long, winner of many prizes at the Royal Live Stock Show, as reported in the Kansas City Star. "The horse is just like the human being in respect to diet," said Miss Long, "and it is admitted that the races of humanity that have made the greatest progress in civilization and the arts are those that have been fed the best. However well fed a horse may be, however good his heredity may be, he can win no firsts if he is ill treated and worried. Food is not the only factor in life; the mental condition is also a prime factor, but feeding is essential to the best looks, the best work, the best disposition, the principle being the same throughout the animal kingdom, as every stockman and every educated physician knows."

Over the Hill to Salyersville.
Over the hill to Salyersville,
Past meadow, field and stream,
I often stroll where church bells toll—
In my evening dream.
With kindly praise of happy days
Spent in circles bright,
Where the Licking flows and moonlight glows,
My heart is there tonight.
Over the hill to Salyersville,
Comes the distant herd;
A gentle breeze sings in the trees
A song of worldless word.
Hears are true and maidens woo
in blush and modest style;
And music peals from rolling wheels
And faces wear a smile.
Over the hill to Salyersville,
A-speeding on the train—
The grasses wave by sloping caves
And fields of golden grain.
Over the hill to Salyersville,
Where towers pierce the air,
Is joyful health and peaceful wealth
Without the Miser's care.

Rail Road up Licking Valley to Virginia Line.

The incorporation proposes to build a road from the Ohio river in Kenton, Campbell and Bracken counties up the Licking Valley to the Virginia line.

Parcels Post.

In obedience to a natural law the village is disappearing. Inexorable change that is the result of our industrial development. And here I want to give the whining, fawning opponents of the parcels post a few things to think over (if they ever indulge in the luxury of thought). One of the arguments that they put up is that the parcels post will wipe out the villages. Let's see. The parcels post is not a law yet, and in traveling through Ohio and Indiana last year I saw that the villages were gone. On their sites grew the farmer's grain. Postoffice gone, stores gone.

What did it? Good roads. Yet nobody regrets the good roads. Instead of the postoffice the rural carrier brings the mail to the farmer's door. Instead of the country store the "huckster," on his well scheduled route, from the city store, brings the farmer his common needs and furnishes him a market for his produce. The farmer has both his buying and selling market at his door. These huckster wagons are veritable stores and carry almost as varied an assortment as the country merchant, and if they lack an article the perfect system of telephones enables them to get it by the "hurry-up" wagon within a few hours. The village and the country merchant have passed away before coming of good roads, yet no cry goes up from the prosperous community for a return to bad roads. They have met the new conditions and adapted themselves to them.

The same jackasses who bray so vociferously in opposition to the parcels post are the ones who lift up their voices for individual effort and parrot the brutal drivel about the survival of the "fittest." And they are too dense to see the glaring inconsistency of their own argument. Most of their chatter is blatant sophistry or downright lying.

Analyze it! If individual effort is the philosophy of life, then why, in all reason, should not the farmer seek the cheapest market to purchase and the highest market to sell? Who is the fittest to survive, the many farmers or the single country merchant? Because a man selects a country cross-roads and puts up a store must the farmer pay tribute to him in added profit and increased price of goods? "It keeps the money at home," they wail. The devil it does! Will the price paid for the few vegetables he buys equal the increased price exacted from the many farmers? The money the farmers pay to the country merchant goes to the Jew wholesaler principally. The parcels post would simply reduce the price of goods the farmer and laborer pays the amount of the extortion he suffers at the hands of the express companies plus middle-men's profits, and gives the markets of the world to select from.

It's no use to kick against the inevitable. The village must fade before the onward march of good roads, and the parcels post will supply a need that must be filled. Only the express companies and the cross-roads merchant will be losers. The county seats will be the centers of distribution and the people in general will be more prosperous. Good roads will bring the change. The employment of labor by the country merchant is a pipe dream. He usually builds his own chicken coop and pig pen. He only adds one more profit between producer and consumer.

This is not number one for the emissaries of the express companies to crack. When they have tested their tricks on this I have others in reserve.

Fall to, boys!—L. T. Hover, male in Licking Valley Courier.

GOOD SUGGESTIONS FOR THE MERCHANT

The following pointers emphasize the importance of clean stores, clean sidewalks, pure air, ample light, neat clerks and other things that most merchants and concerns might overlook.

How to Attract Trade.

The way you run your business is your best or your worst advertisement. If you are not getting as many customers as you should get, then you are not doing the proper things to attract trade.

A business properly run advertises itself and attracts trade. If careless methods are used you cannot expect the best results. To run your business properly does not require expert advice, but thought and attention.

Your success depends on what other people think of you and your business methods. In figuring out how you can attract more trade, put yourself in the position of the public and look at yourself and your business as they look at you.

Clean Sidewalks.

A clean sidewalk, especially on stormy days, is sure to attract the attention of the passer-by, which will naturally draw his attention to the windows.

Always make it a point to keep your sidewalk clean.

Your Windows.

Keep your windows clean inside and out. Change your window displays often. Many times customers coming into your store to buy some particular article will have their attention called to some other article in your window, and buy things that they did not originally intend to purchase. Use neat, attractive signs in your windows, calling attention to prices and particular bargains or specialties.

Cleanliness.

Clean floors, show cases and counters attract trade. The surest way to promote cleanliness is to have good light.

Proper ventilation is very important. People are often unconscious of good ventilation, but bad ventilation is undesirable and very unhealthy.

Lights.

Keep your store well lighted inside as well as out. A well lighted store is always attractive to people passing. When your customers come into your store they appreciate your showing your goods to advantage.

Remember that unusual things attract trade and advertise your business. You must not be absurd, but you can do unusual things without doing ridiculous things.

Neat Employees.

People like to see employees with clean collars and like to see goods handled by clean hands. Have plenty of soap and water always at hand so that your employees can have facilities for keeping clean.

The Best Advertising.

The best advertising in the world is "mouth to mouth" advertising. Treat your customers so well that they will tell their friends about you and your business and advise them to deal with you. This is the cheapest and best advertising in the world.

You have often heard it said, "A satisfied customer is the best advertisement." This is absolutely true. You know that satisfied customers talk favorably about your business and dissatisfied customers either do not talk at all or talk unfavorably.

Suggestions.

If your business is so situated or so large that you should be newspaper, billboard, street car or window advertising, you will find that neat clean looking printed matter is the best investment. Remember that your competitor can buy the same space in the same newspaper that you can. Whether your advertisement will be more attractive and bring you more business than his, depends entirely on what you say in the space you buy and how you say it.

Important. Simplicity is the most important thing to emphasize in giving instructions to a printer or newspaper as to how your advertisement should appear.

Don't crowd your advertisement. Don't think that because you are paying for space you have to fill it all up. What you want is to get your advertisement read—oftentimes the more white space and the more simplicity, the quicker people will notice and read it.

Stick to Your Subject.

If you are advertising bargains, price is the thing to emphasize. If you are advertising regular goods at regular prices, the thing to talk is quality.

Always emphasize service, mentioning careful attention customers get from your employees, prompt delivery of goods purchased, freedom from mistakes, etc.

Be specific. Tell why your goods are good goods. Don't make claims that are not true.

Straightforwardness and simplicity will attract people quicker than so-called originality. Some advertisements are failures because they are too original.

In dairying there is no excuse for the man who goes at it blindly and blames luck and the weather for his failure.

Only well bred stock that is well fed and well taken care of can make money on land worth $100 or more an acre.

Farmers with heavy steady work now generally try to secure drafty horses even when farm work is the sole object.

The strainer never was made that would take foul matter out of milk. None ever will be. You have got to keep it out.

If all the chickens and full-grown hens run together, the stronger chickens will get most of the feed and keep the others poor.

It is self-robbery to take a dairy cow through the winter when she gives milk only five or six months out of the whole year.

If the cow's pedigree tallies with the milk pail, then it is consistent and a good foundation, or a poor one as the case may be.

Fancy points may be of no advantage to the farmer, but pure-bred fowls will naturally possess just as great utility as the scrub.

Before laying a cement stable floor care should be taken to have the ground below properly drained and the foundation well constructed.

Selection is absolutely necessary in order to breed and build up a good dairy herd. One must cull closely here as well as in all other lines of work.

Many good, careful farmers find it practical to hog off some of their corn. It will pay you to look into this question, if you have not already done so.
